[illegible]

A technical cross-section drawing of a building facade. The drawing shows a window and door assembly. The window is divided into three panes: a top pane, a middle pane, and a bottom pane. The door is located below the window and is also divided into three panes. The building has a sloped roofline on the left side and a flat roofline on the right side. The drawing is a line drawing with hatching used to indicate different materials or sections.

This architectural drawing shows a side elevation of a building. The roof is gabled, with the left side being steeper than the right. The roof is supported by a series of vertical structural elements, possibly rafters or trusses, which are visible as a series of parallel lines. The facade features several openings: on the left, two tall, narrow rectangular windows; in the center, a large arched opening; and on the right, a smaller rectangular opening. The building is shown in a simple line-drawing style, with no shading or texture.

This architectural cross-section illustrates the structural details of a building, including a gabled roof and a basement level. The drawing includes the following dimensions and labels:

- Roof and Upper Levels:
 - Roof height from the top of the wall to the peak: 150.
 - Height of the upper floor from the top of the wall to the ceiling: 245.
